Introduction

Do you remember how you felt when you first arrived at RISD? Staring out your window and trying to decide who to be? Maybe you already knew, but maybe you were unsure how much of yourself to reveal, unsure of how exactly you wanted to present yourself.

The wheel turns.

Since then, perhaps you've complicated your relationship with yourself. Perhaps you've learned to share your interiority through new mediums, challenged people to see you in new ways, in the ways you want to be seen. You know the value of curating your exterior, the agency in any act of expression, the deftness with which you construct your own identity. And yet you know the outside sometimes does not match the inside. And there may be many reasons for this. But disjunction is not a bad thing. You love the layers of a person. As RISD students, aren't we all interested in the problem of expression? In that question of how much to reveal, and how much to be left unsaid. We know what it means to look, and to be looked at. We know that tension between inside and out, between the self and other, between truth and fiction.

Through our work we offer a window into ourselves, or maybe it is a mirror reflecting back. We know the importance of bringing the inside out and the outside in. Of blurring the distinction between the two. Of stepping over that threshold, and stepping back again, and again, and again.

The wheel continues to turn..

Literary Arts + Studies

Something is rotten in the state of ... oh cursed spite, that ever i was born to set it right!

A line from Hamlet's soliloquy that I like to mumble to myself.

I likewise enjoy the line Polonius in "Hamlet" says to his son en route to university abroad: "The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel." Shakespeare always asks the big questions, "To be or not to be?"

Makes me think of the metaphorical question about the life and mission of the arts: "window or mirror?" Does the painter reveal one's own life or look outward at the scenes beyond? And are experiences "revealed or left unsaid?" All excellent dilemmas. Plus that strange word "curate" which comes, according to my big brown leatherbound dictionary, from assisting pastors, such as curates, and then moves to museum staff who help us look at art. Anyway this page gives me the chance to "curate" my window or mirror reviewing these, my, our, past four or five years. Here goes: What's rotten in the state of Rhode Island is the interior of the Superman Skyscraper, a.k.a. the Industrial Trust Building, with its divinely elegant interior once upon a time, its eloquent exterior visually narrating in bas relief the history of Rhode Island, from its early colonial days when Roger Williams rowed his canoe to greet the kayak of the indigenous Narragansetts (with the friendly phrase "What cheer, Netop") all the way to the looms of the immigrant weavers from Quebec who worked in the mills of the new Industrial Revolution. Your alma mater was born from the challenges posed by that Industrial Revolution. How to create the best products ... and the highest hopes and dreams, and how to challenge the problems posed by that Revolution—up to you now to face those tasks and opportunities. Our students like to draw the dirigibles overhead from that single skyscraper near our intimate campus, and sometimes a homeless philosopher may intrude into its ghostly interior where pigeons roost, to inspect the bygone splendor and pride of its ruined but remembered, abandoned spaces. I seek with these printed words to save it and dedicate its renewal to the memory of my brother "Chick," a professor emeritus and former head of our interior architecture department, who passed away during your sophomore year, in the winter of 2017-8. Chick's commitment and dedication was to find new uses for noble buildings rather than tearing them down and cluttering the ocean floor with our debris! ... that ever I was born to set it right!

The friends I have and their adoption tried? All of you. As for "curation," perhaps I overexplain in words ideas that exist primarily in Design itself, the scribbles and searches of your pen, pencil, or brush held in talented, capable, dreaming fingers. No need for too many words, think with your fingers and your back! So be it! So as you pack up your gear and set forth upon the uncertainty of your future travels, both inner and outer, let me bless your voyages with syllables from old ballads, or lines from Victorian verse and slogans, or phrases from the Bard. As that doddering and also doomed Polonius declares to his beloved but equally darkly destined son, "This above all, to thine own self be true!" Can I leave it at that with humble hopes for the happiness, the pursuit of which was written as a promise by Thomas Jefferson as a pledge to the long tomorrows? And by the way why was that tower of Hope, the motto of the state of Rhode Island named upon and within your diploma called the "Superman" structure? Well, the original high schoolers who dreamed up the fantastic hero who could leap tall buildings in a single bound and prevent the inevitable disasters of the great troubled planet of their time and culture, those two talented youngsters stopped at our downtown train station, sketched the then new Industrial Trust towers, and moved along clickety clack up to Maine with its loons laughing on the secluded ponds. They did not profit from their invention. Others exploited their skills and imagination. So with you, our beloved students. You'll draw and dream and your bosses will profit from you. So: watch out, do your best, trust in the life of the spirit and the magic of your gifts. And don't forget. Although the motto of our state is "Hope," the island that hides at full moon and high tide is a dangerous rock called "Despair" Stick instead with the green mansion island called on charts "Hope."

Dear FAV class of 2020,

You are amazing.

As you shift your focus, from being a RISD student towards being a maker out in the larger world, I encourage you to value every scale of making. From tiny marks you make on a page every day, to the significant accomplishments that you will achieve over time — all of it is important.

Time is your material. Shape your time into to the life you want to lead.

Please stay in touch,

Dear Seniors,

It's hard to believe you have reached this point so quickly (weren't you just sophomores five seconds ago?). It's hard to believe how much you've changed, learned, made, experienced. And from where I'm sitting, it's hard to believe that you are wrapping up this undergraduate experience now and that it's happening like this: in the midst of a health crisis where you are being challenged every day to balance personal health and safety with emotional health and economic precarity. It's hard to believe that some of the beloved rituals that are usually organized to celebrate you and usher you through this passage: degree project, final reviews, parties, commencement, may all drastically change due to these extraordinary times. It's hard to believe.

But here is what is not hard to believe: you will emerge on the other side of all this and you will be profoundly transformed. Your RISD transformation began when you set foot in your first foundation class, and it has continued every week, every day, every second since then. Every time you yourself pushed past your limits, or struggled to grasp a new concept, or helped a friend through a challenging moment—you were transformed. Every time you registered the failure or success of something you made, or witnessed an artwork so inspiring you felt it in your bones—you were transformed. Every time you advocated for yourself or others, or participated in a protest, or argued with the establishment, or questioned someone's motives—you were transformed. Every party you went to, every conversation you had, every embrace you offered, every all-nighter you pulled—you were transformed. And in this transformation, you have become receptive, strong, compassionate, thoughtful. You hear with a more finely tuned ear; you see with a more experienced eye, and you know better than ever how to read, and interpret, the signals and signs all around you.

When I look outside today, the signs I see are a brilliantly blue sky and an encouraging sun, but very few humans on the streets. Nature herself is sending us signs as clear as if they were billboards dotting a highway. While she dangles her beauty in front of our eyes, she simultaneously ushers in a menacing new virus, expertly designed to move swiftly and decisively throughout the globe. And the thing is, this virus is doing exactly what it is designed to do—to self-replicate and reproduce with speed and efficiency—and by putting it into the world, it's almost as if Nature is giving us one more chance to read her signals: that we have to begin now, with no time to waste, doing what we humans are best designed to do: work collectively, in community, for each other, and for the planet. You seniors know how to do this. You've been doing it for years now. And we applaud you.

Dear ones, as you move through yet another transformation, having experienced so much and found your inner strength in so many unexpected places, know this: you are amazing, you are strong, and you are leaders in a variety of ways. You see more clearly than those who have come before you—as every new generation does. And with your clear vision and your transformed selves, I have faith that you will invent new ways to exist in a precarious world. The external universe is hard to predict and not always stable. But trust your inner world, your inner selves. Spend time there, where you are in control. And also, look up, look outward, see one another, engage. And look to Nature for her signals and her metaphors. And if you can, spread your passion, your thoughtfulness, your insights, your wisdom. And whenever you can, make it go viral.

INTAR

To the Interior Architecture
Class of 2020:

A mountain of paper, cardboard, trace, models, empty coffee cups, half eaten dinners—a reflection of the tumult of the final review week with its sleepless nights, bleary eyed stares into the computer, the flurry of last minute printing. From here you embark on your future outside of the 6th floor, beyond Weybosset Street.

The times have changed since you first entered the Department of Interior Architecture. Today, even as we strive to live true to the beliefs we shared as citizens of our department, we do so in a convergence of violence, racism, intolerance, inequality, xenophobia. At another turbulent time in the history of America, when our nation was divided by civil war on the issue of slavery, American transcendentalist Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote in his essay Self-Reliance, “Trust thyself.” Then, Emerson expressed that, “Nothing can bring you peace but yourself. Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles.” Standing here today between the end of school and the future that is tomorrow, I wish you this triumph in all that you undertake outside of Intar.

May your croissants reveal bright new futures.

Come back soon,

“One of the beautiful things about art or writing can be that it comes from you, represents you in the crowd, bears your handprint, it tells your story, it’s personal in the indifferent universe, it’s fun in such grim times, the hopeful thing that is your own gift to give. when you survive as an artist or writer, you will produce art and writing that will help you to survive.”

Afterword

Rosanne Somerson

President

Rhode Island School of Design

When you and your classmates arrived at RISD, you entered new terrain, a landscape that was relatively untested in its intensity. But over the past years, you have been challenged and pushed as never before, and in the process have advanced new aspects of yourselves as individuals and creative talents. Working with self-invention, and making sense of your own curious undertakings, you have learned how your queries and impulses can be woven into and through an artistic practice. You have shed some old skins and tried on others, when exploring novel realms and mastering new forms of language. You have seen what you can originate on your own, and what can be achieved through the power of creative collaboration. Through all these experiences, you have matured into thoughtful artists, designers, and scholars as well as professional culture makers concerned with building a world that you want to live in. You now join a most distinguished group as RISD alumni. And so the wheel turns.

I have a rare vantage on that wheel turning, having been a RISD undergraduate myself. All that I learned at RISD is now channeled back into all facets of my work to insure that every RISD student has the fullest creative education possible. And what constitutes that education has been shaped very much by your voices, talents, and concerns. If RISD has helped prepare you to become a creative leader, a change agent in the world, I can assure you that you have helped complicate and enrich the teaching and mission of our school. And by so doing, it is you who will help influence the next generation of RISD graduates. Through this rare and special dialogue, you have already contributed to making that world that you want to inhabit. We are all grateful for what you have achieved, and what you will continue to do to further shape the future and make RISD proud.
