After 70 years of disappearance, in 2000, partial wreckage of a Lockheed P-38 Lightning F-5B was found in the ocean off the coast of Marseille.

On April 7, 2004, wreckage was identified that it was from Antoine's F-5B.
But he is gone forever.

On July 31, 1944,
Antoine de Saint-Exupéry took off from an Allied air base in Borgo, Corsica, headed for the Grenoble region in southern France to take reconnaissance photos.
He and his plane,
a Lockheed P-38 Lightning F-5B, never returned.
