— Miss Suzie Porter depicts a middle-class black woman in Victorian dress in 1910's Harlem. The photograph was taken by James Van Der Zee, a famous photographer from the Harlem Renaissance, but this was taken before the movement truly started. It is a prelude to a boom in Black art that will influence the art world and many other artists in the future. It is a very simple photograph, of a woman in Victorian dress.

The main subject, Suzie Porter, is placed slightly to the left of the center and is the central focal point of the image. She is dressed in a white Victorian dress with long white gloves.
