

RHODE ISLAND SCHOOL OF DESIGN, PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

PORTFOLIO 1969

Dedicated to Jack Massey

Everyone these days is urged to be creative.

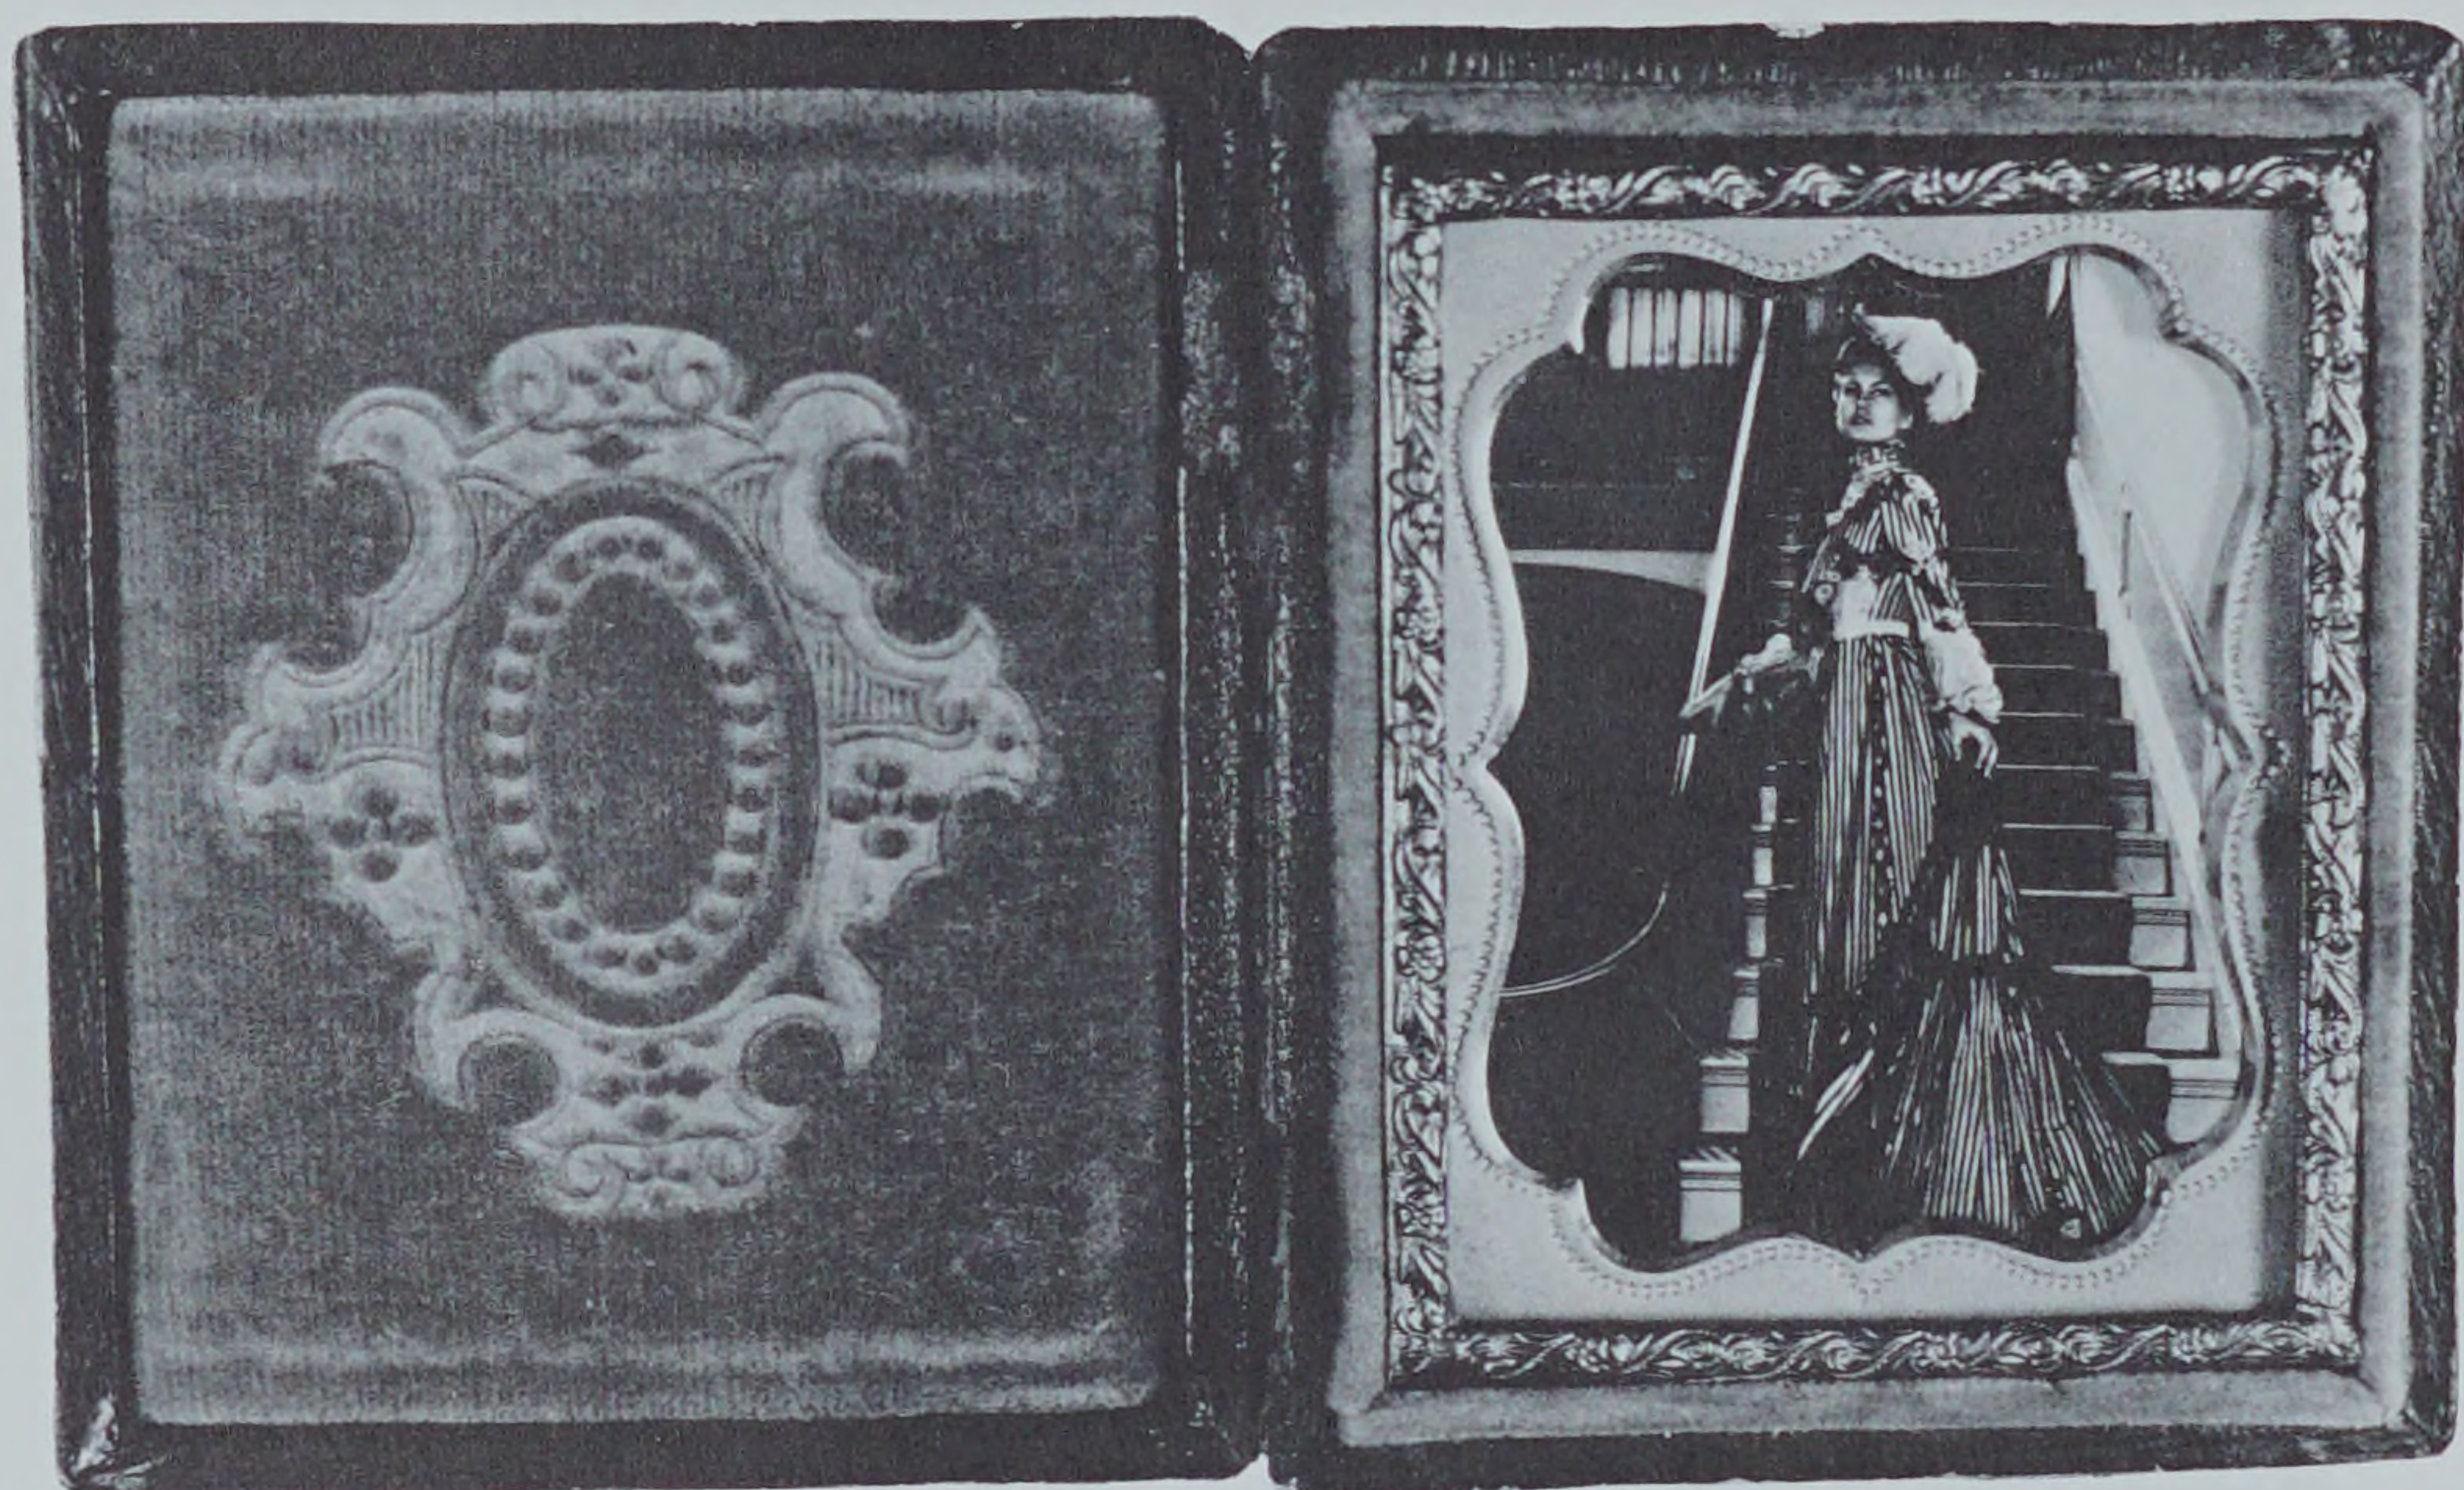

Creativity is a prerequisite for success; students, educators, business men, politicians, ministers, physicians, plumbers, and policemen are expected to come up with a creative response upon demand.

The result of this requirement to be creative seems to be that the distinction between creativity and innovation grows blurred. Too often the effort to be creative produces only innovation, and even more deplorable is the growing tendency to value innovation for its own sake.

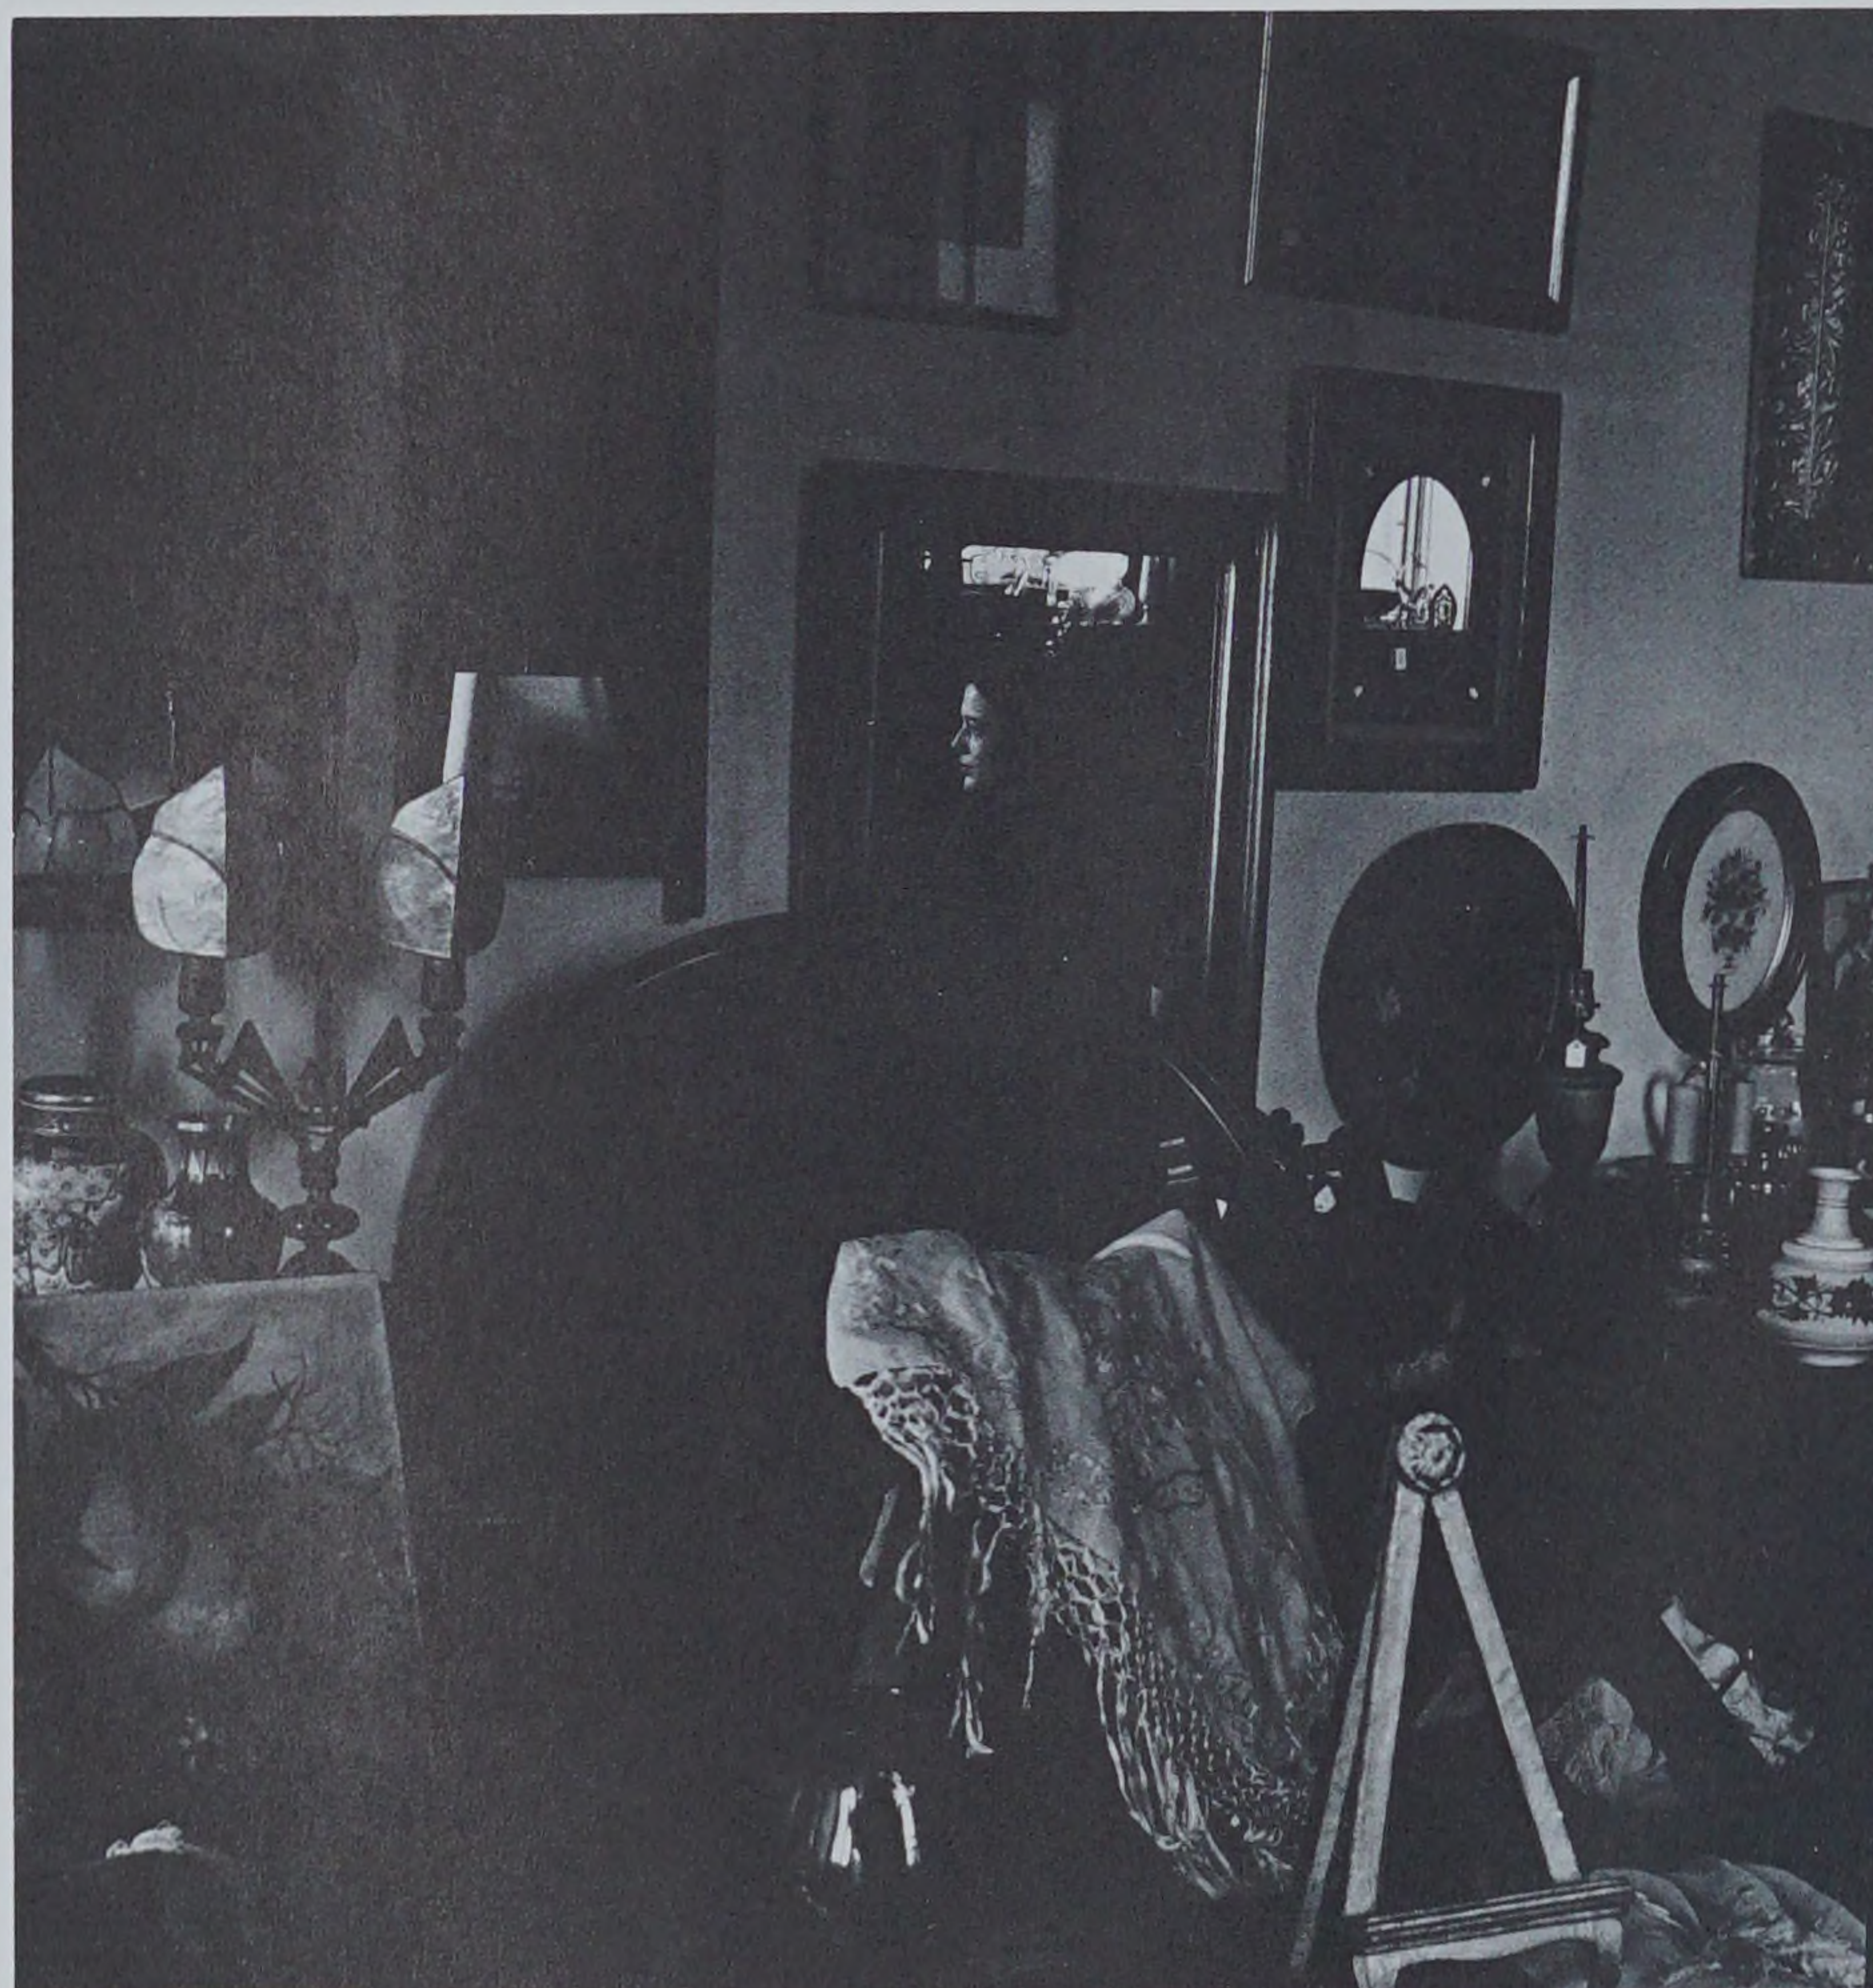

Creativity is not simply cerebral; it is also visceral. It does not come off the top of the head, nor from the finger tips. It comes from the guts, deep inside. This college cannot make a student creative, but it can provide experience and guidance through which his creative talents may eventually find both release and appropriate avenues for expression. As a result his creative act will produce not simply something new, but something of value to both himself and others. The preparation of this book is such an act.
