This millennial project brings together two ideas, measurement and risk, at one location: the book - and - relatives.

... special about a millennium, or the 2,000th year of Christian, or Common Era (which is 1420 in the and 5760 in the Jewish calendar)? Basically about the human worship of numbers. ... that wonderful word, coming from the mouth of Re himself: speak Ma'at, do Ma'at! — Those who have spoken Ma'at on earth, those who have not approached the impure, they will be called to this gate, they live on Ma'at. — I live on Ma'at, I exist on Ma'at, I am Horus in the hearts amongst the intestines, I live on what I speak. My heart exists, it shall not be stolen, my heart is mine, it shall not be harmed. — I live on Ma'at, I eat from Ma'at. — Great is Ma'at, lasting and strong, it has not been disturbed since the days of Osiris. He who violates her laws will be punished, but this seems to be far away to the greedy one. — He who fulfils Ma'at is lasting, and he who continues accordingly. Only he can make his last will and testament, but the greedy one has no grave. — I have left my city, I have left my district, after having spoken Ma'at therein, after having done Ma'at therein. May you fare well, my descendants, and may you be justified, my descendants! — I have left my city, I have left my district, after having done Ma'at for my master and having satisfied my Lord with what he loves. I have spoken good and repeated good, I have spoken Ma'at and done Ma'at — I have raised Ma'at high to the top of heaven, and I have spread her beauty around the earth, that she shall fill their noses like the northwind and expel bitterness in their bodies. — I enjoyed words of Ma'at, I loathed hearing lies. I have done Ma'at on earth as often as are hairs growing on my head. — Nobody reaches the west, whose heart was not honest in doing Ma'at.
