

CACAFORM BIRDS

I IMAGES

ZHU YINGCHUN

▼ CATALOGUE

▲ IMAGES

CACAFORM BIRDS

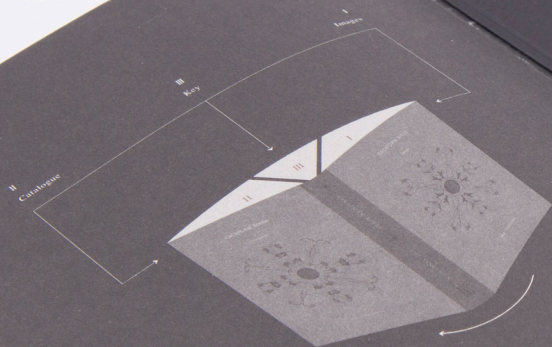

II
CATALOGUE

II CATALOGUE

II CATALOGUE

ISBN: 978-1-28844-007-1
9 781785 840071 511010
www.accaformbooks.com

Please now turn to the back of the book to find Chapter II, which answers the question: "What are the Cacaoform Birds?"
Remember that ancient Chinese texts were read from right to left.

Please read Chapters I and II first.
Then break this seal to Chapter III,
to reveal how Cacaoform Birds come in to being.

CACAOFORM BIRDS
CHAPTER III 237

082

083

084

085

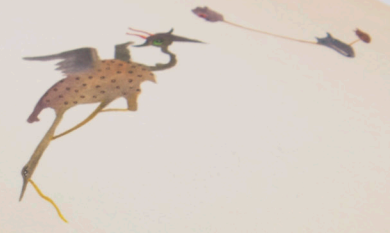

Malaria

It sticks its tail straight up like a no-nonsense withered branch.
When another bird comes to perch on it,
the tail suddenly drops down,
and the approaching bird scurries off in fright.
The Malaria also likes to stand beside you and has fun tripping people up with its tail.

Chameleon

A beautiful bird greenish-brown with eyes like enormous stalks.
It likes to have someone see its tail.

▼ CACAFORM BIRDS
CHAPTER III
KEY ▼

Miscitavola

Its cry is like a cat's mew, but it also waxes like a hawk.
All day long it is woken and irritable.
At night it flits about through thickets and stacks of bamboo,
never spending a tranquil moment.

Y CACHORN BIRDS

CHAPTER III

KEY